Doing Alright

for piano

CERA WANG

2026

Full score

© 2026 Cera Wang

All rights reserved.

Unpublished manuscript. Not for sale.

This work is not registered with a collecting society. Permission for performance, broadcast or recording should be sought from the composer.

Preface

Doing Alright is a single-movement work for solo piano, composed in 2026. This score is the composer's own fair copy and constitutes the definitive text; no earlier version is authorised.

Acknowledgements

Thank you to Dr.Sunabacka for leading the MUSIC 376 course in which this score is written for.

First performance

Oct. 21, CGR 1302, Waterloo

Bowen Zhang, piano

Duration

c. 1′00″

Programme note

The piece is built from one short blues melody in A minor, which returns in several settings: carried up and down octaves, with added values, and retrograded motion. The piece serves as a reminder to the composer that, even if the path that one takes isn't conventional or defined as successful, even if there's voices saying you're wrong, it doesn't mean that it is wrong. You can still lay back and enjoy it, pave your own path, and in the end it's just going to be alright.

Doing Alright

Cera Wang

© 2026 Cera Wang